

Sustainable Business Council: Pre-election briefing - Business lifting the ceiling, government raising the floor

The Sustainable Business Council ("SBC") has just released its pre-election briefing which aims to share its members' views on the concept of sustainability, and explain how business can work with and inform the government after the election. SBC's pre-election briefing has identified areas where business and government can work together.

SBC proposes a series of initiatives with a three year timeframe, which complement its wider leadership in this space and its more long term projects.
